Leading Mobile Surveillance Provider, Zedcor, Reaches 1,800 DirectToDispatch™ Deployments Across North America, Announces 3Si

Malvern, PA USA and Calgary, AB Canada— 3Si Security Systems, a leader in technology solutions that help bridge private security intelligence and public safety response, today announced a major milestone in its partnership with Zedcor Inc., one of North America's leading mobile surveillance providers. Through the deployment of DirectToDispatch™ (DTD), Zedcor has expanded access to verified dispatch-ready intelligence across more than 1,800 customer locations throughout the United States and Canada.

As the first mobile surveillance provider to offer DirectToDispatch™ as part of its service portfolio, Zedcor is helping demonstrate how remote video monitoring organizations can deliver verified alerts with actionable intelligence to law enforcement during verified incidents requiring response.

DirectToDispatch™ is a verified police dispatch pathway that enables security organizations to deliver dispatch-ready intelligence directly to law enforcement dispatch centers. Dispatch remains the crucial point of coordination and may share intelligence directly with responding officers on their mobile devices, providing greater situational awareness before arrival. DTD works alongside established public safety workflows and preserves law enforcement authority and decision-making.

A key factor in Zedcor's rapid deployment was 3Si's established law enforcement network, which includes more than 10,400 agency partnerships across North America. This existing foundation enabled Zedcor to scale DTD across its customer base while supporting agencies through familiar dispatch workflows and trusted response pathways.

"Zedcor's deployment is an example of what happens when verified intelligence, professional monitoring, and trusted public safety partnerships come together," said Craig Frost, Senior Director of Channel Partnerships at 3Si. "Their ability to scale DTD across 1,800 locations demonstrates how security organizations can provide meaningful situational awareness during active incidents while supporting the dispatch professionals and officers responsible for responding."

Unlike many monitoring providers that rely on third-party monitoring services, Zedcor owns and operates its mobile surveillance towers, technology platform, and monitoring center. This end-to-end model enables the company to verify incidents, curate actionable intelligence, and deliver verified alerts through DirectToDispatch™ within a single operational workflow.

"For years, monitoring centers have had visibility into incidents that could only be communicated through a phone call and a verbal description," said Todd Ziniuk, President and CEO of Zedcor. "Our operators can see exactly what's happening on a site, but historically that visibility wasn't always available to responding officers. DirectToDispatch™ changes that. It gives law enforcement a clearer picture of what is occurring during a verified incident while allowing us to elevate the value we provide our customers. We often describe our mobile surveillance network as an eye in the sky. Now we're able to pair that visibility with a verified pathway that helps deliver actionable intelligence when it matters most."

The milestone reflects a broader shift across the security industry toward verified intelligence sharing during crimes in progress. By combining professional monitoring, verified visual intelligence, and DTD, organizations can support more informed response preparation while preserving established law enforcement workflows and decision-making authority.
